Abstract

Everyone has something to offer! It is up to companies to work with staff and managers to understand how they can best contribute. This can be done by allowing staff to demonstrate their value through combined individual, team and group coaching. This can help in building a reputation of trust and support, and creating an environment where staff are able to work at their best. Ultimately this will also lead to improved morale, greater audit efficiency, more opportunities for staff and managers, and greater ease in managing audits.

Coaching is a unique opportunity to focus and move forward with your personal, professional and organizational goals through the exploration of ideas with confidential dialogue and unbiased thinking.

This seminar will introduce coaching concepts including presenting some practical coaching takeaways for managers.
